Excerpt: ... sought the comforts and quiet of a home in civil life. The next day the officers had to return to Harrisburg, to settle up their accounts and indebtedness with the Government and get their pay, which kept them two or three days. After adjusting their accounts, a final "farewell" took place, and the last obligatory vestige of the noble old 51st P. V. and 51st P. V. V. was lost to the nation's view; and now, since we have obtained our pay and are mustered out, free of military restraint and discipline, we bid farewell to the cannon's roar, hoping it shall never again be heard in battle with our own people.
