The text deals with both the search for the wrecks of the Hood and Bismarck and gives a brief history of both ships. It clings to the notion that the fatal shot taken by HMS Hood penetrated the deck armor which is unlikely as the range between the two ships dictates a shot angle of no more than 14 degrees and possible a little as ten degrees. It also concludes that the bow separation on the wreck of the Hood was caused by a magazine explosion when there was no magazine in that area. I could pick on a couple of other items but even if you are into the minutiae as I am, the book is still worthwhile and a good addition to any nautical library.0
