The campaign was a classic of Napoleonic tactics, as Marshal Davout held one German army at bay while Napoleon concentrated his forces to defeat the main one.A complete history of the Napoleonic campaign, featuring alot of magnificent color plates illustrating all of the campaigns, with particular emphasis on the uniforms of the military units and personalities of the Empire. The magnificent color illustrations by Andre Jouineau make this book a extensive use for any modeller or historians, also show with hundreds of additional color sketches of headgear, buttons, equipment, insignia and alternate garments; includes navy, infantry, how widely most armies of the time have different uniforms. Readers of F.-G. Hourtouille's acclaimed BORODINO will find the same extraordinary detail in this study of Napoleon's 1806 campaign. The evolution of the battle is described with the aid of numerous new color maps. 144 pages, heavily illustrated in color 21 of 23 people found the following review helpful. Uniforms Regimental Colors with Good English Descriptions By PPlimpton@MSN.com Descriptions of the battles of Jena Auerstadt are a dime a dozen, and this translation from the original French adds little that is new. This volume does stand out because of the excellent color plates with superb uniform detail that is available nowhere else unless you read German and can afford the mightily expensive volumes by Kling. The reproduction of not only the uniforms by regiment, but the unit colors as well make this volume unique (Hans Bleckwenn was scheduled to cover this material, but he died before he could complete his study.) The plates of French uniforms are hardly unique, however, they are useful and well done and have the somewhat unique status of being all in one volume (the Elting volumes are excellent, but they do not present a full homogeneous picture of a regiment.) The plates by Jack Girbal are an additional treat. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars By LK Very satisfied with book and delivery time.

The First Empire was at its height during the Jena-Auerstadt campaign of 1806. The campaign was a classic of Napoleonic tactics, as Marshal Davout held one German army at bay while Napoleon concentrated his forces to defeat the main one. This excellent book combines an informative narrative with paintings of the battles and a superb collection of images of uniforms and equipment from the period - all in color.
